Reflection Essay Set “CROSSROADS” Part 1

As a general studies major, I've had an average experience with writing. I've always been decent at it, but I wouldn't say I've ever been particularly passionate about it. In high school, I did okay on my essays and papers, but I never really enjoyed the process of writing. It always felt like a chore to me. In college, I've had to write more frequently, and I've learned to appreciate the importance of clear and effective communication. However, I still don't consider myself a "writer" in the classical sense. I'm more of a "get the job done" kind of guy.

Regarding this course, I'm a bit concerned that I might struggle to keep up with the writing assignments. I'm not used to writing extensively, and I worry that I might not be able to produce quality work. However, I'm willing to put in the effort to improve my writing skills and learn from the course.
